ADMINISTRATIVE AND EXECUTIVE EXPERIENCE, 2023-

DEAN OF THE FRANKLIN COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES

Professor of Communication Studies, cross-appointed with the Louise McBee Institute of Higher Education and the Institute for Women's and Gender Studies, 2023-

Franklin is UGA's largest, oldest, and most diverse college with 50+ departments, schools, institutes, and research centers; performance facilities, art galleries, and the Georgia Museum of Natural History; 150+ academic programs; $140M annual budget; 9,500 undergraduate and 1,800 graduate students; 1,000 faculty; 500 staff, $118M in annual research expenditures; $1.8B in economic impact; and 100,000 living alumni. Six Associate Deans lead the divisions of Fine and Performing Arts; Humanities; Social and Behavioral Sciences; Biological Sciences; and Physical and Mathematical Sciences, including the School of Computing and the AI Institute. Lateral portfolios include Faculty Affairs; Research and Partnerships; Academics - undergraduate, graduate, honors, professional, online; Global Engagement; Facilities; and Enrollment Management. Five Staff Directors oversee Finance and HR; Marketing and Communications; Development and Alumni Relations; Student Academic and Career Services; and IT.

PRIORITY INITIATIVES AS DEAN OF FRANKLIN COLLEGE

Academic Innovation: launched a new Office of Academic Innovation to support cross-unit collaboration in new applied, career-oriented certificate and degree program development alongside new online professional, applied master's programs. Collaboration with provost office to effectively manage enrollment in relation to revenue; streamline academic program management; enhance recruitment, retention and time to degree through data-informed analysis; integrate startup and entrepreneurship training, experiential learning, internships, and capstones across curricula; expand Honors offerings; and increase study away/study abroad options especially for computing and the sciences. Launched project to configure related academic programs in larger administrative units to accelerate collaboration and ensure consistency.

Operational Effectiveness. Within a credit-hour activities-based budget model, the college has instituted a multi-year planning process to work collaboratively across units to optimize instructional activity by tenure-stream faculty, delivery of more credit hours with maintained faculty ranks, and efficiency in workforce allocation to better serve undergraduate and graduate students. In partnership with the Provost's budget office, the Vice-President for Research, and the Vice Provost of the Graduate School, Franklin redesigned its IDC/F&A model to enable strategic reallocation of resources to support new investments, doctoral recruitment and support, and faculty entrepreneurship. Increased training and education for unit directors on new budgeting principles and effective recruitment and enrollment management, as well as celebrating and recognizing positive change efforts.

Faculty Development and Research Innovation: Leveraged new multidisciplinary cluster hires to support cross-unit collaboration in areas from AI, computing, and data visualization to ethics, materials, and health humanities. Amplified internal faculty leadership efforts and launched an Academic Administrative Fellows program. Redirected internal funds to support the launch of a new Office of Research Innovation to facilitate team science, large proposal development, corporate engagement, including through new seed-funding to accelerate multidisciplinary inquiry; supported new faculty advisory committee in designing research incentives; partnered across the university to advance efforts in multidisciplinary health and medicine; launched new college standing committee to support faculty external recognition through prestigious awards, etc.

Community Building: initiatives include new Office of Academic Community and Engagement, with three appointed Academic Fellows, focused on strengthening internal community and sense of belonging and collaboration with HBCU-MSI-HSI institutions; launched taskforces to strengthen Institutes of Native American Studies, African American Studies, and cross-cultural and language studies; provided integrated leadership development for unit executive officers as part of monthly college meetings to build an internal leadership pipeline; collaborated with undergraduate and graduate elected senators to identify student benefits and college advocacy for their priorities; expanded student ambassador program for community building and connection; supported advisors and staff in designing new promotional pathways with clear criteria.

Development & Alumni Relations; Marketing and Communications; Culture Strengthening. Led multi-year positioning campaign in collaboration with an external firm to increase recognition, reputation and resources through strengthened internal and external multichannel communications; designed a metrics-driven strategy, implementation plan, and collaborative approach across the college to build internal community and mission-alignment alongside strategic graduate program recruitment. Reconfigured Development and Alumni Relations to a liaison model, implemented data-driven approaches, and designed a three-year Innovation Initiative to secure private support for comprehensive academic innovation priorities. Doubled philanthropic giving in one year; and reached the highest-dollar of giving in nearly a decade with 11% increase in number of donors.
